Autumn hunting season

Weather conditions in autumn are variable. Incorrect treatment of game will inevitably lead to reduced quality, and eventually to total deterioration. Measuring the number of day-degrees is the best way of controlling this process. This is what the GameGuard does, at the same time as it registers relative humidity and air temperature. GameGuard together with our instruction manual will give you tips and advice regarding treatment of game from the time it is slayed until it is ready for partitioning.

This is what professionals say about the product

From Scandinavian press and hunting magazines:

- excellent for large game and for those who want to sell large game as well.

Jørund Lien, Norwegian hunting magazine "Jakt", no 10/2005

- We thought we had good insight and knew all about tenderizing since we have people on the team who have been hunting moose for 45 years. But we will definitely buy a GameGuard. That will be a good investment.

Big game hunter Rune Sørholt, November, 2005

- This Norwegian-developed GameGuard is quite simply a stroke of genius!

Dag Sundseth to the Norwegian magazine "Vi menn", no 34/2005

- Using this instrument, you can assure that the game is hung sufficiently.

Swedish hunting magazine "Svensk Jakt", no 9/2005

Far too many hunting teams neglect the importance of tenderizing. With Game Guard, your Sunday steak will definitely be easier to chew.

Swedish hunting magazine "Jaktmarker & Fiskevatten", no 12/2005
